Abstract

This article discusses Tablighi Jamaat as Islamic transnational movement that emerged in the early 20th century and attracted a great attention post 9/11 in America. One of the interesting points that invite debate among scholars is whether Tablighi Jamaat is a part of radicalist movements or terrorist groups or only an Islamic missionary movement. Those debates are related to the existence of Tablighi Jamaat around the world. Moreover, it can be said that Tablighi Jamaat has settled in every country in the world. American Foreign Council report shows that tablighist is estimated to have 50 to 80 million people. The numbers have invited suspicion of policy maker from many countries, particularly on the issue of radicalism. Discussion on this article based on basic questions on who are Tablighists, their aims and their activities. However, the main purpose of this article to show how scholars argue on the existence of Tablighi and possibility on Tablighi Jamaat involvement on radical actions. In general, this study is based on library research.

Keywords: Islamic transnational movement, Radicalism, Tablighi Jamaat.

Background

Tablighi Jamaat might not be a popular Islamic movement before nine eleven (9/11) bombing in 2001, because of the silent movement in the global world. Other Islamic transnational movements such as Jamaati Islami, Ikhwanul Muslimin, or Hizbut Tahrir are more popular than Tablighi Jamaat movement. In fact, followers of Tablighi Jamaat called as Tablighist are more than the other Islamic transnational movements.

American Foreign Council\(^2\) claims that Tablighi Jamaat members are around 50 to 80\(^4\) million and outspread in almost every

\(^2\) In this article, Tablighist refers to singular and Tablighists is for plural.

\(^4\) Shireen Khan Burki, based on some reports, states that the number of Tablighi Jamaat 70 to 80 millions in more than 150 countries. See Shireen Khan Burki, 'The Tablighi Jamaat: Proselytizing Missionaries or Trojan Horse?', Journal of Applied Security Research, 8.1
country around the world. The movement has established branches as a coordinative center (markaz) in more than 200 countries. Tablighists are now exist in developed countries as well as in developing countries. They have high mobility to disseminate tablighi teaching, as a main mission of the movement, not only in local communities but also in other countries. Their efforts called as dakwah (Islamic missionary) have accelerated Tablighi Jamaat diasporas to whole the world. In addition, there are other factors encouraging of disseminating on Tablighi Jamaat movement, such as their dakwah system and good relationship among Muslim and non Muslim.

Barbara D Metcalf states that the 9/11 moment has popularized on Tablighi Jamaat as a global Islamic movement. The terrorist incident had shaken not only for American, but also for international communities. Tablighi Jamaat faces Islamophobia and panic international communities that were connecting Tablighi Jamaat with terrorist issues and other Islamic radical movements. It is logical and rational due to its emergence and its center in India, Bangladesh, and Pakistan where Taliban movement from Pakistan tends to be connected some radical and terrorist regarding on nine eleven bombing.

Even though Tablighi Jamaat has not been proven involving with the 9/11 bombing, there are some efforts to associate that Tablighi Jamaat has a connection with the radical movements. This article analyses the issues on any perspectives from some researches and works. It will be begun with history of Tablighi Jamaat emergence, the background of the movement, the ideology and doctrine, as well as the main goals of the Tablighi Jamaat. In the main discussion, it will be analysed Tablighi Jamaat diaspora in global world and a polemic of Tablighi Jamaat involvement on radical movements.

Tablighi Jamaat’s Name and the Emergence of the Movement

Tablighi Jamaat does not have an official name as we are recognizing at the moment. However, the name was used by many people to call the movement founded by Maulana Muhammad Ilyas Al-Khandalawi (1885–1944). Tablighi Jamaat emerged in Mewat, North India in 1920s. Maulana Ilyas, the founder never named the movement, except people gave the name due to its characteristic and main goal to do Islamic missionary (dakwah). Literally, Tablighi Jamaat contains two words, tablighi means delivering the religious message, preaching and inviting people to follow religious paths. While Jamaat means congregation. Historically, Kamaruzzaman Bustamam Ahmad mentioned many names referring to the movement, such as jamaat (party), tabrīk (movement), nizām (system), tanzīm (organization), tablīgh (dakwah), and tabrīk al-imān (faith movement).

All of these names, the movement is also called with other important names, such as Jamaah Ilyasiyyah or Ilyas follower.

Politically, Tablighi Jamaat emerged as the effect of the collapse of the Indian Khilafat Movement. Many Islamic movements wanted to re-enlarge the Islamic caliphate. Tablighi Jamaat was established in such context, although Tablighi Jamaat did not intersect with politics directly and did not campaign for the establishment of the Islamic caliphate. Its political movement was more directed through education and reform of faith. This effort is seen by Masud as a missionary technique and the establishment of a dakwah method in modern society. Muslim leaders learned the skills of a modern organization, publicity techniques, mass contact and the use of printing press from khilafat.

The Islamic global political situation after the fall of the Ottoman Turkish khilafat in 1924 prompted clergy in India to think about Islamic politics. While clerics incorporated in Jamiat-e-Ulama-e-Hind (JUH), Khwaja Hasan Nizami, Sufi attached to the shrine of Nizamuddin Auliya, Maulana Abdul Bari of Firangi Mahal Madras, and Maulana Muhammad Ilyas saw negatively to politics and thought for the benefit of Muslims. Ali saw that from these three scholars only Maulana Muhammad Ilyas who then seriously struggled to build Muslims by the establishment of Tablighi Jamaat. Ilyas dedicates himself fully and became the architect of Tablighi Jamaat. Tablighi Jamaat, itself concerned more on educational movement than on politics.

(associated with the founder). Some people called Bhopali Jamaah (Bhopali congregation), where Tablighist held annual assembly after the death of Maulana Ilyas in Bhopalo, Madya Pradesh. In fact, Maulana Ilyas prefer tabrik al-iman (faith movement) as a name of the moment.

In Indonesia, the movement is recognized as Jamaah Tabligh, even though there are some popular names to call Tablighi Jamaat. At least, there are five popular names in Indonesia. First, it is jamaah jenggot (beard congregation) due to their willingness to allow beard growing. Second, some people call jamaah konkrang because tablighis tend to cut their pants higher than common pants. Third, it is jamaah jualah (itinerary congregation), because of their missionary activities from house to house and door to door. Forth, Tablighist is called as Jamaah Dakwah. This name is similar to Tablighi Jamaah or Jamaah Tabligh, a congregation who delivers religious messages. Finally, Tablighi Jamaat is associated with the name jamaah kompor (stove congregation) due to their daily activities in a mosque, such as sleeping, cooking, eating, taking bath and other activities. Even it has many names, Tablighi Jamaat is the most popular name around the world.

The emergence of Tablighi Jamaat tends to relate to political, social and cultural problems during British rule in India.

Socially and culturally, Muslims in India were exposed to Hindu militant groups in purification (Suddhi) and consolidation (Sangatan) efforts that occurred in 1922. This Hindu revivalist movement, also known as Arya Samaj Sect threatened Islamic groups so that Muslims would be vulnerable to Hinduism or forget and neglect the true teachings of Islam. At that time, many Indian Muslims were still attached to Hindu tradition, while the teachings of Islam were no longer run. Maulana Ilyas wanted Indian Muslims to return to the pure teachings of Islam as exemplified by the Prophet and his companions\(^{18}\).

Maulana Ilyas took the initiative to teach Islam to the younger generation in Mewat by establishing a madrasah (Islamic school). However, this effort seems to lack the hope of Maulana Ilyas, this could not be separated from the socio-economic conditions of Mewat people, Meos. There were still many common people who had not gotten the true teaching of Islam. Finally Maulana Ilyas invoked to learn Muslim to preach. Ilyas argues that the dakwah task is the duty of all Muslims, not only scholars\(^{19}\).

Moreover, Ahmad explains that the emergence of Tablighi Jamaat was the result of the spread of Sufi, including thariqat group (mysticism sect) in Asia. Tablighi Jamaat is an offshoot of Deoband school, reformed Hanafi Sunnis which eschew the cult of saints but accepts a purified from Sufism. Ahmad notes that Maulana Ilyas was a member of the Chistiyyah Sufis in India. This Sufi group did not intend to make conversion non-Muslim to Muslim. The objective of the group was to provide spiritual guidance to people as the result, the pattern of Tablighi Jamaat movement tended to focus on spiritual reinforcement rather than politics\(^{20}\).

Besides these problems, the economic crisis on Meo farmers, dweller of Mewat, North India, triggered emergence on Islamic identity movement constructed by Maulana Ilyas. Meos living with poverty caught in debt from Hindu people, Banias. They must return the loan interest 5% per month or 60% per year. As result, Meo Muslims had to lose their land because of incapability to pay the debt. This situation caused a riot in Mewat during 1932-1943, and that was recognized as riot-interest\(^{21}\).

Tablighi Jamaat pioneered by Maulana Ilyas succeeded to inject religious awareness into Meos to return on the right tract, Islamic teaching and to leave mundane. Ali\(^{22}\) states that Maulana Ilyas persuaded and inject Islamic teaching that had been forgotten by Meos. Moreover, Maulana Ilyas built Muslim confidence by dakwah movement and invited Muslim to back Islamic missionary. Meo farmer misery might be caused by their ignoring on Islamic teaching and they tended to pursue worldly pleasure.

The Root of the Movement

As explained above, Tablighi Jamaat emerged in complicated situations that were faced by Indian Muslim, particularly in Mewat. The condition shaped on the future Tablighi Jamaat movement character including of influenced on its ideology and doctrine. Another fact that could not be denied was the founders of Tablighi Jamaat were alumni of masdahrah Deoband.

According to Barbara D Metcalf\(^{23}\), madrasah Deoband, Dar al-Ulum was Islamic education institution or seminary founded in \(^{20}\) Bustamam-Ahmad.

\(^{22}\) Ali, ‘Tabligh Jamaat.
\(^{23}\) Metcalf, ‘Traditionalist Islamic.'
the late of 19th during the British rule in India. The madrasah was founded by Maulana Muhammad Qasim Nanauvti and Rashid Ahmad Gangohi in 1866. As an Islamic education institution, Islamic subjects were thought, such as al-Qur’an, hadist, tafsir (interpretation), jurisprudential, and Arabic language. The madrasah was uncommon education institution as other formal education institution, because there were not grade classes, paid staff and systematic curriculum, as a British education institution. Additionally, the madrasah was not supported by the modern system, such as appropriate office, limited infrastructure and limited access road to the madrasah.

Most Deoband students seemed from poor families and they lived modestly around the madrasah. Both Metcalf and Ali state that most Deoband teachers and students followed sufi paths that emphasized on spirituality and modest life. They used Urdu as a lingua franca, a common language used by Muslim communities to show their identity.

Madrasah Deoband had a special character in education, teaching hadist. Moreover, Ali claims that besides teaching hadist as a core of Deabond curriculum, the madrasah followed Hanafi School as one of Sunni Islamic jurisprudence. Deobandist was also inspired by Wahabi movement, a religious sect founded by Abdul Wahab in Saudi Arabia. As a result, Deobandist hardly attempted to purify Islamic teaching from Hindu influences in Mewat.

Many alumni from the madrasah initiated on emerging of Islamic movements both in India and Pakistan. As one of Deoband alumni was Maulana Ilyas where he was influenced and inherited religious system and tradition of Deoband. He was learning from two prominent leaders of Deoband, Maulana Rashid Ahmad Gangohi and Maulana Khalil Ahmad, thariqat Naqshabandiyah followers. Ahmad also states that Maulana Ilyas affiliated to thariqat Naqshabandiyah, then he was also influenced by Thariqat Qadariyah.

Ali claims that most Deobandis followed Sufi ways including Maulana Ilyas. They focused to implement pure Islamic teachings including and to incorporate Islamic tradition in early periods. That would also affect religious model and teaching of Tablighi Jamaat. Hence, Barbara D Mcetal called Tablighi Jamaat as an Islamic revivalism, meanwhile Bulbul Siddiqi categorized it as a reformist group and Jan A. Ali addressed as a traditionalist.

However, an interesting one that differs Tablighi Jamaat from other Islamic movements is that Tablighi Jamaat focuses on Islamic missionary as the main goal, not on Islamic education as madrasah Deoband.

Tablighi Jamaat, an Islamic...
Maulana Ilyas saw that education had a limitation on spreading Islamic teaching and values. Tablighi Jamaat also did not also directly involve in resistance toward British colonial, but Tablighi Jamaat efforts were to organize Muslim to return on articulating of Islamic teaching purely. Perhaps, it was due to Thariqat Qadariah influences as a Sufi group. In another side, suf path tends to compromise and harmonize conflict. This view influenced Tablighi’s ideology and doctrine that are less conflict and accepts many schools in its movement.

Ideology and Doctrine

I ideology refers to a basic concept on ideas or notions that underlie on how to think and acts of communities. Jary and Jary add that ideology can legitimate dan justify one group to another. Ideologically, Tablighi Jamaat rooted as the same ideology with all Muslims generally. Tablighists believe in five fundament of Islam (five of rukun Islam) and six faith principles (six of rukun iman). Both of the basic principles is fundamental that tablighist believes. That is a part of tablighi commitment to implement Islamic teaching purely. As Maulana Ilyas, the founder of tablighi invited Muslims to return on Islamic teaching consistently and purely.

Tablighi Jamaat basic ideology then directed shaping on tablighi differently from other Islamic movements. Barbara D Metcalf states that Tablighi Jamaat ideology and doctrine were divided from Al-Quran, Hadith, and some text books written by Islamic scholars such as Riyadussalibin, Fadbaillul A’mal, Hikayatus Shababat, and others. However, the ideology and doctrine is a form of dialectic among ideology with social, politic and culture realities. Particularly, Tablighi Jamaat ideology might also correlate with social and religious communities in Mewat, North India.

Regarding Tablighi Jamaat ideology, there are two basic aspects that have to be referred. First, the basic Islamic ideology aspect believed by every Muslim is tauhid (God is one). Second, it is religious moral aspect such as interrelationship among human being. The aspect might greatly influence on tablighi’s ideology and doctrine that then articulates to be six principles. The six principles are duties for every Muslim, such as believing in one god, Allah and His messenger (shabatat), praying five times in a day (shalat), respecting to other Muslims (ikram al-Muslim), having sincere intentions (iblas al-niyat), and sacrificing and sparing time for dakwah.

The six principles are a system of thought and mode of thought that guide every Muslim to do religious activities. The principle is very fundamental for Tablighi Jamaat and every Tablighist believes and implements the six principles as his/her ideology and doctrine.

Based on the six principles, tablighists enlarge to their ‘rule of law’ that regulates tablighist’s attitudes and behaviors. In Tablighi Jamaat teaching, there are 28 important points that must be followed by tablighists. The points divide into seven doctrines. First, every Muslim should do more in four points. These are da’wah ilallah (inviting to Allah’s rule). It can be done by discussing the greatness of God and his creator; ta’lim wa ta’allum (studying and teaching), both moral excellence of human being and religious excellences; dzikir ibadah (thinking on religious services), such as prayer together, most suggestion prayer (shalat sunnah), reading qur’an, praying in every time, praising for prophet (shalawat), and asking forgiveness to Allah in the morning and evening; and kbidmat (servicing) to internal congregation of Tablighi Jamaat, society around, and him/herself. Second, Muslim should do less on four points, such as too much eating and drinking; too much sleeping. It is recommended to sleep six hours only in a day. Muslims should be in a mosque, except for missionary work. Lastly, Muslim should not talk more about a property or something relating to business. Third, Muslim should leave on four points, such as praying to another god, asking to another god, isyrof (copious) and ghashab (using something belonging to other people without permission).

Fourth, Muslim should keep on four points. Muslim should obedient and loyal to religious leader (amir); keep on honor of mosque, such as not talking about politic in mosque, because mosque is to pray and dzikir (always thinking about god); give priority in jitma’i ritual (collective) than infirdi ritual (individual) and be patient and calm. Fifth, Muslim should avoid on four points. There are avoiding masail khilafiyyah (pluralism in scholarship paradigm, both in belief and Islamic jurisprudence); avoiding talking about politics, talking disgrace of societies and scandal in societies and differing on social strata in societies. Sixth, Muslim should keep a relationship with four persons. Those are ulama (Islamic scholar) and their followers; mursyid (thariqat leaders) and their teachings; mushanif (writer of Islamic books) and da’i (Islamic cleric and Islamic priests). Finally, muslin should remove on four points, such as criticizing, discriminating, humiliating and debating.

Tablighi Jamaat’s ideology and doctrine have influenced on dakwah systems, such as khuruj (preaching tour), ta’lim (learning on religious teaching), jaula (preaching visit), and bayan (religious lecture or talk). Every tablighist implements four dakwah systems in most daily religious activities and the systems are integrated activities. For instance, when a tablighist is joining khuruj for some days, he will also join on ta’lim, jaula and bayan. Basically, the four dakwah systems are daily activities for every tablighist, and the activities are meaning as dakwah.

Dakwah, itself is the main goal of this religious movement. Dakwah means invitation to every Muslim to do his/her best in articulating of religious teaching. Dakwah is not only for tablighist, but also for every Muslim verywhere. The founding fathers of Tablighi Jamaat movement emphasized on dakwah as a Muslim duty. For tablighi every tablighist or Muslim must do religious missionary and preaching tour (khuruj) minimum once during his/her lifes. However, every tablighist have to join dakwah a day in a week, seven days or a week in a month, 40 days in a year and during 120 days during entire his/her lives.

Tablighi Jamaat Around the World

It is irrefutable that Tablighi Jamaat developed rapidly across to whole of the world. During Maulana Ilyas leadership, he might never think that Tablighi Jamaat would spread to other countries, except India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh. During his leadership, Tablighi Jamaat was slowly spreading only in West and East India. However, after the death of Ilyas in 1944 or before India independence, Tablighi Jamaat disseminated rapidly. Maulana Muhammad Yusuf (1917-1965), a son of Maulana Ilyas led Tablighi Jamaat movement. He did not only expand the movement on entire India, but also many countries in Asia and Africa. One of the most important doctrines is dakwah (Islamic missionary) not only duty for ulama (Islamic scholars), but every Muslim. This doctrine is supported by teaching that all Muslims are one unity, it means that every Muslim around the world should do religious missionary as tablighist did.

Tablighi Jamaat spreads across the whole countries and all continents, such as Asia, Australia, Europe, and America. This diasporas can be traced through the internet by a search engine. There are many reports from government authority or scholars around the world. The existence of TJ is easy recognized due to their physical identity and some missionary activities, particularly when tablighis do khuruj and some activities in mosques. Even though we can not identify that every Muslim that has a similar appearance physically and have activities in mosques as tablighis. We have to investigate deeply to identify Muslim as tablighist or not. However, based on my experience tablighists are an inclusive person that can show their identity.

Tablighi Jamaat is now spreading in almost every country, both western countries and Islamic countries. Ali states that Tablighi Jamaat has developed in Europe, America, as well as in Australia. In America, at least 50,000 tablighists reside in most countries, such as California, Texas, New York, and others. They have an annual assembly called ijīma’. In Canada, Tablighis held an annual meeting since 1997 that attended around 4000 tablighis.

Even though Tablighi Jamaat was established earlier in the United State of America than in Europe, Choudhury claim that the growth of Tablighi Jamaat in Europe countries spread faster than in America. There is no clear information when Tablighi came to Euiropan countries. Tablighi Jamaat was massively spread during 1970 and 1980s. For example, in France since 1980s, the representative of Tablighi Jamaat was involved in the French Council of the Muslim Faith. Tablighist was doubled before 2006, estimated to 50,000-100,000. British tends to be centre of Tablighi Jamaat movement in Europe. In the 1960s and 1970s, Tablighi Jamaat came to Britain, and now Tablighi Jamaat has a representative in 600 of 1350 mosques in Britain. In the 1980s, Tablighist established a centre of the Tablighi Jamaat as well as a mosque in Dewsbury, New Yorkshire. It seems Britain as a centre of Tablighist movement in Europe due to a large number of Tablighist living in the country. Tablighist also spread over some Europe countries such as Germany, Belgium, Italy, and other countries.

In Africa continental, Tablighi Jamaat got a great response and spreaded rapidly. American foreign Policy Council claims that Tablighi Jamaat has established 35 markaz (centre office) in 50 countries. Marloes Janson states that Tablighists from Asia mainly from Pakistan disseminated tablighi ideology. They taught Islam in English due to the same language. Tablighi Jamaat spread the tablighi teaching to Gambians in the 1960s. Recently, it is estimated that 13,000 Gambians joined Tablighi Jamaat. From Gambia, Tablighi teachings are spreading in some countries in West Africa such as Morocco, Mali, Mauritania, and Niger. In North Africa, for example in Morocco, Tablighi Jamaat was known as Jama’at al-Tabligh wa al-Da’wah (JTD). In other countries such as Mali, Mauritania, and Niger, the three majority Muslim countries, Tablighi Jamaat got a good response from local Muslims on those countries. Additionally, in South Africa countries, Tablighi Jamaat have influenced on Muslim communities.

In Asia, Tablighi Jamaat has disseminated in most of the Asian countries. Most Muslims in Southeast Asia have recognized Tablighi Jamaat well, and some of them have involved in the dakwah movement. In Central and North Asia, it is believed that Tablighi Jamaat played an important role in ‘re-Islamization’ in that countries such as Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan, and Kazakhstan, particularly after the end of the Soviet Union in 1991.

Tablighi Jamaat penetrated in the Southeast Asia countries, such as Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, Tahliland, and Philippines in 1950s. According to Farish A. Noor Indian descents was an effective medium to introduce Tablighi Jamaat to Muslim communities in those countries. In Indonesia, Tablighists from India came to Jakarta in 1955. They did not have any relationship with Muslim Indonesia. The eight tablighists from India landed in Cengkareng, Indonesia international airport and hired taxi without a certain destination. They asked the driver to escort to Indian people in Jakarta. Finally, they got Haji Zaristan Khan, Indian descent that obtained Indonesian citizenship. In Malaysia and Singapore, Tablighists came to Indian communities in Penang, Kuala Lumpur, and Singapore. They were supported from Indian descents in the two regions.

In Indonesia and Malaysia, as two majority Muslim community countries in Southeast Asia, Tablighi Jamaat has shaped large attention. Tablighi teaching has influenced on some Muslim communities in Indonesia, such as in Masjid Kebun Jeruk Jakarta, Bandung, Mangkang Semarang, and Temboro, East Java. Meanwhile in Malaysia, Tablighi Jamaat has strongly influenced on Islamic missionary organization, such as Darul Arqam, YADIM (Yayasan Dakwah Islam Malaysia), JAKIM (jawatan Kemajuan Islam Malaysia), dan PERKIM (Muslim Welfare Organization of Malaysia).

As Islamic transnational movement, Tablighi Jamaat seemed to be accepted by Muslim communities in many countries. There are some reasons why Tablighi Jamaat is easily accepted by many Muslims, even though the reasons are relatively debatable based on social, politic and culture issues. In Indonesia for example, As’ad Ali Said\textsuperscript{51} states that there are four reasons on easily accepting Tablighi Jamaat. First, Tablighi Jamaat minimizes debatable and differences in Islamic law (fiqh). Tablighi tend to accept all Islamic scholars in fiqh. Second, Tablighi Jamaat tends to follow Sufi teaching that accentuates worship rituals. Third, Tablighi Jamaat missionaries tend to be more positive than radical. Tablighists concern on inviting Muslims to do goodness (amar ma'ruf) than fighting evil (nahi munkar). It implies that they focus on building a good Muslim character. Finally, Tablighi Jamaat spreads between dakwah (Islamic missionary) and politic. Additionally, they refused to talk politics.

Another important factor on spreading Tablighi Jamaat is Indian descent networks between Indian tablighists or Pakistan tablighists and Indian descent communities around the world. That was occurred in Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore and Thailand, as a research report done by Farish A Noor and Kamaruzzaman Bustaman-Ahmad.

Radicalism Issues on Jamaah Tabligh

As an Islamic transnational movement, Tablighi Jamaat received a negative spotlight, particularly post terrorist attack in some countries. Tablighi Jamaat is connected to the terrorist action, even there was rarely evident. The debates invite some scholars to discuss whether Tablighi Jamaat is a radical religious movement or even terrorist movement. Discussion on radicalism is also related to the meaning of jihad as a measurement on radicalism. Jihad tends to be understood as a holy war to fight toward other religious communities recognized as enemies or fight evilness. Jihad in the meaning of holy war is connecting on radicalism and terrorism issues.

Regarding the issues, according to Barbara D Metcalf\textsuperscript{52} spotlight on Tablighi Jamaat as a radical group is soared after the 9/11, the terrorist attack in the USA. This was due to Tablighis’ physically appearances that are similar to Arabian people. In America, Barbara D Metcalf\textsuperscript{53} claims that it is difficult to differentiate between Tablighists and Taliban. Both of them have the same appearances physically as well as have a historical connection as rooted from Madrasah Deoband\textsuperscript{54}. The physical appearance of tablighist might invite suspiciousness of western people that Tablighi Jamaat is an Islamic militant group or jihadists.

Based on these views, it is logical if scholars debate who is Tablighi Jamaat, radicalist movement or missionary religious group? Regarding these debates, there are three group scholars. The first group identifies Tablighi Jamaat as an Islamic missionary group only. The second group tends to be more analytic that Tablighi Jamaat might be as a dakwah group and radical movement. The last group claims firmly that Tablighi Jamaat is a radicalist movement and as stick path toward radicalism and terrorism.

The first group identifying Tablighi Jamaat as an Islamic missionary movement and the emergence of the movement is as a social, cultural and religious phenomenon. Many scholars research Tablighi Jamaat as this phenomenon such as Barbara D Metcalf, Muhammad Khalid Masud, Farish A Noor, Jan A Ali, Kamaruzzaman Bustaman-Ahmad, Abdul Aziz, and many more. Barbara D Metcalf studies some aspects of Tablighi Jamaat, such as women role in Tablighi

\textsuperscript{52} Metcalf, ‘Tradisionalist Islamic.

\textsuperscript{54} Metcalf, ‘Tradisionalist Islamic.
Jamaat and root of Tablighi movement. Metcalf sees that Tablighi Jamaat is a unique Islamic revivalist movement. Muhammad Khalid Masud studied was quite similar to Metcalf’s works. Even though Metcalf and Masud study many aspects from Tablighi Jamaat, they tend not to identify Tablighi Jamaat as a radical group. Moreover, Metcalf finds that there are significant differences between Tablighist and Taliban. Taliban tends to involve in politics, meanwhile Tablighi tends to be a politic and focuses on Islamic missionary.

Research from Farish A Noor and Kamaruzzaman Bustaman-Ahmad have the same location setting in Southeast Asia. Farish A Noor conducted data in Indonesia, Singapore, Malaysia, and Thailand. He analyzed the growth of Tablighi Jamaat in Southeast Asia and found that Tablighi used Indian descent network in introducing and spreading tablighi teaching. While Kamaruzzaman Bustaman-Ahmad studied Tablighi Jamaat in Aceh Indonesia and Malaysia. According to him, Tablighi Jamaat did not only preach Muslims, but also affect on Islamic organization particularly in Malaysia. Beside Noor and Ahmad, the same research was also done by Abdul Aziz, where he stated that Tablighi Jamaat is a unique religious movement. Another scholar doing research is Jan A Ali who classified Tablighi Jamaat as Islamic transnational that has a high survival in the world. Even Ali classified Tablighi Jamaat as an Islamic traditionalist movement, tablighi survives in modern and western communities. Moreover, tablighis is less affected by modernity. These scholars state that Tablighi Jamaat is not radicalist movement, even the movement can be classified as an Islamist movement. Additionally, Aziz classifies Tablighi Jamaat as peaceful fundamentalist.

The second group tends to be careful to classify Tablighi Jamaat as a radical movement or Islamic missionary group only. The group attempts to analysis comprehensively Tablighi Jamaat in all dimensions, the emergence and growth of Tablighi Jamaat, its involvement in many societies. Marc Gaborieau states that basically Tablighi Jamaat differs from radical groups, because Tablighi Jamaat tends to sufistic practice in their missionary. Even Tablighist believes that every Muslim has to join jihad, Tablighist tends to mean that jihad is not to join a holy war (by a sword). Notwithstanding, Gaborieau in another of his writing states that there are some tablighists supporting Taliban movement associated as a radical group.

Muhammad Amir Rana in the report of Pak Institute for Peace Studies 2009 states that Tablighi Jamaat is not a terrorist group. Even Rana did not deny some facts correlating Tablighist in some terror actions. Rana claims that some young tablighists join tablighi to study basic Islamic knowledge, after the process Tablighi Jamaat can not control where they are and what they do. This is caused due to a weak organizational structure or even the absence of the Tablighi Jamaat organizational structure.

The last group claimed Tablighi Jamaat as a fundamentalist movement that has a connection to radicalist and terrorist networks. Ameer Ali\(^6\) identifies that Tablighi Jamaat has similarity with Hizbut Tahrir, a political Islamic transnational organization. Even Ameer Ali states that Jamaah Tabligh and Hizb ut-Tahrir are different organizations but one goal (divergent path to convergent goal). While Hizb ut-Tahrir is associated as a radical Islamic political movement, Tablighi Jamaat is seen as an encouragement to radical movements.

Ali discussing the different of Tablighi Jamaat and Hizbut Tahrir states that Tablighi Jamaat is also a radical group like Hizbut Tahrir\(^6\). Both of them have different on the way to gain the goal. Indeed, he states that Tablighi Jamaat with its ideology and doctrine creates a mindset, especially among its young followers, that has potential to drive the youngsters either towards a life of lethargy withdrawal, and exclusion or to become more radical and violent. In either case, these youngsters seek to achieve through their commitment to the elusive heavenly benefits of the hereafter. While the first option makes them less active and indifferent to the economic, political, and social issues confronting Muslim societies, thereby making them a class of social parasites. The second option prepares them to become martyrs in the hands of jihadis\(^6\).

Alexiev states that Tablighi Jamaat believes that jihad can be done by reforming his/herself (jihad bi nafis) and jihad by fighting against other religious followers (jihad bi saif)\(^6\). Tablighists prefer to jihad bi nafis, reforming the faith and personal quality\(^6\). However, according to Alexiev, tablighi adopts wahabism ideology, and Wahabi-Salafi jihadis. Moreover, Alexiev notes that Tablighi Jamaat has involved in in the sponsorship of terrorist groups\(^6\). Harakat ul Mujahidin, jihadi group founded in 1980 at Raiwind, was sponsored Tablihigt. More than 6000 Tablighists have trained in Harakat ul Mujahiddin camps. Many fought in Afghanistan in the 1980s and readily joined Al-Qaeda after the Taliban defeated Afghanistan's anti-Soviet Mujahiddin. Zahid\(^6\) corroborate the Alexiev argument that Jamaah-e Islami has close interaction with Tablighi Jamaat. Many of their activists have overlapping membership.

Interconnection of Tablighi Jamaat with some radical groups is still debatable. Hedges stated that dearth of open data on linkages of Tablighi Jamaat with radical (terrorist) groups is problematic and they are mere the product of Islamophobia than scholarship and investigation\(^7\). Additionally, Haedge states that Tablighi Jamaat tends to reform individual faith than to encourage people to be jihadis. In the words of Metcalfe, the preeminent American scholar on Tabligh state: “Deobandi movement was, in fact, alike in one crucial regard that set them apart from other well-known Islamic movements. What they share was an overriding emphasis on encouraging a range of ritual and personal behavior practices linked to worship, dress, and everyday behavior”\textsuperscript{71}.

However, the thing that cannot be denied is the social situation, politics, and culture living in a place where Tablighi Jamaat exists. The involvement of Tablighi Jamaat members in various cases of radicalism may be casuistic, not in movement, as the involvement of Abu Bakar Ba’asyir and Abdullah Sungkar in various cases of radicalism in Indonesia. Both of them had participated in the early movement of Tablighi Jamaat in Solo \textsuperscript{72}. Further, both Ba’asyir and Sungkar had radical thought that differed from Tablighi Jamaat. Both of them then involved in some terrorist activities in Indonesia.

Tablighi Jamaat may not encourage the growth of radicalism; however, certain groups take advantage of the revivalist movements driven by Tablighi Jamaat into the radical side of politics. For example, the totality of a Muslim is to practice religion properly in accordance with the demands of religion, to be ‘kaffah’ Muslim in various sides of life or other teachings. The less-Islamic life is considered a danger or an enemy that must be resolved soon. However, it can be seen from some ‘bayan’ (religious sermons) in Tablighi Jamaat activity, a suggestion to crush ‘munkar’ by violence is never taught. ‘Bayan’ in Tablighi Jamaat is filled more with the suggestion to do good (amar ma’ruf) than to prevent evilness (nahi munkar). The reform of individual faith becomes the main target of religious lectures (bayan) which was conveyed by Tablighi Jamaat ulama (scholar).

Tablighi Jamaat as a religious movement still focuses on the reform of faith to create a morally solid Muslim. But it does not close the possibility of deviation by members, especially in certain areas, such as Afghanistan, Pakistan or other.

\textbf{Conclusion}

As the largest transnational movement in the world, Tablighi Jamaat faces challenges in crucial issues like radicalism. Moreover, the background of its emergence as an Islamic revivalist movement is close to the madhhab of Wahabi. It is undeniable that the background of Deoband School also inspires the birth of radical groups.

The emergence of transnational political Islam groups such as Hizb ut-Tahrir, Jamaati Islami, Harakah al-Mujahidin, Taliban groups, and others give the allegations to Tablighi Jamaat as a radical movement. However, certain facts and notes of scientists group have not supported that Tablighi Jamaat produces radical groups. In some cases, the revivalist spirit of Tablighi Jamaat may inspires the emergence of radicalism, but the thought that religious teachings and practices of Tablighi Jamaat lead to radicalism still needs deeper analysis. Perhaps Tablighi Jamaat, as Hedges \textsuperscript{73} state, only emphasizes on daily ritual and the equation of devotion with discipline personal practice.
